

Group attempts to restore city's oldest synagogue

staff reports

Published: October 11, 2015, 7:18 am | Updated: October 11, 2015, 9:34 am

Dick Wolfsie learns about a plan to restore the city's oldest synagogue on October 11, 2015 (WISH photo)

INDIANAPOLIS (WISH) – As neighborhoods and communities change, that can cause some buildings and structures to fall into disrepair.

As a result, this has caused some to put plans into action to restore historic and otherwise significant buildings to their former glory.

One group, the Temple Heritage Center, is attempting to do just that as they work to restore Temple Beth El.

Dick Wolfsie stops by and talks with Jacqueline Nytes about the city's oldest synagogue and how the Temple Heritage Center is working to repair the structure.